Winn Clark Disbands Team, and Men Must Hustle for Themselves-Declares Bradley Did Not Give Him Square Deal in Taking On Jobson.

Portsmouth, Va., July 23.—It is not often the owner of a baseball team gives it away, but that is just what Winn clark, owner and manager of the Fortsmouth club, in the Tidewater League, tried to do all day yesterday Nobody would have it, and yesterday's double-header was the last professional baseball to be played by Fortsmouth this season.

Clark has given up the fight, an uphill proposition from the first of the year, when he tried without success to get local capital interested in the team. Last night the players were paid of the player

Hanlon has been the most insistent of the number who have been bidding for the club, and according to President Russell he has had over half a dozen offers for the franchise, every offer showing a splendid profit over the price paid for the club. Hanlon has shown that he is in real earnest, and alid not lose any time hurrying back to Baltimore in order to gain added support when he found that President Russell considered the club to be worth $250,000. Not a Square Deal.

Clark said last night that Bradley, of Richmond, did not give him a square deal in taking on Jobson. He said he struck a bargain with Bradley, where-by the latter was to pay him a specified sum and was also to pay Jobson his last month's salary. The Portsmouth team did not disband until last night, but Jobson pitched yesterday for Richmond. Clark said he might take the matter to the courts, as a decree in the Newport News case restrained the Virginia League clubs from interfering with any Tidewater players.

The four players sold to the New York Americans brought $1,000. They were Joynes, Appleby, Bowen and Murden. Joynes is playing now with the Americans. The other three players will not join the club until next spring.

around the top. He attributes this year's failure mainly to the location of the diamond, and the lack of local money behind the team. He said last night that on the last trip to Elizabeth City the team did not receive enough to pay actual expenses, not counting in any salaries.

"I expect to stay at home the rest of the season," said Clark last night.
"It is not likely that I will join any team. I was offered a job as manager of the Charleston, S. C., team only a short time ago, but declined, thinking I could carry the Portsmouth team to the end of the season."
